Where did the fires take place?

In the summer of 2025, Spain faced many wildfires, which caused great damage to the environment. These fires started in several regions, including Catalonia, Valencia, and Andalusia. The high temperatures, dry weather, and strong winds made the situation worse. Many forests, fields, and homes were destroyed. Thousands of people had to evacuate to stay safe.

The Spanish government and firefighters worked hard to control the fires, using planes, helicopters, and hundreds of firemen. The fires lasted for weeks, and it was very difficult to stop them. Many animals lost their habitats, and air quality became poor due to the smoke.

Experts say that climate change is making wildfires worse, with hotter summers and less rain. Spain needs to improve fire prevention strategies to protect people, animals, and nature. The summer of 2025 was a reminder of the urgent need to fight climate change.

- a. In 3 regions: Catalonia, Valencia and Andalusia.
- b. All over Spain.
- c. In many regions, for example, Catalonia, Valencia and Andalusia.
- d. In several regions, but not in Catalonia, Valencia and Andalusia.
